Croydon College

Demco designed and provided furnishings for the state of the art Learning Resource Centre at Croydon College.

The library provides a learning commons approach to bringing learning resources and social sharing together in one space. The original tender brief was to have the project split into shelving only and other design. It was Demco's expertise in being able to overcome the challenges and offer a new way of approaching the project that so impressed the library team and won them the complete contract for concept, installation and delivery.

Tom Butler, Head of Library and Learning Resources, Croydon College was very pleased with the decision to go with Demco "It took away a lot of stress having one company and one point of contact managing the whole thing. It gave us a more joined up approach".

The College attracts students from a very wide geographical area bringing with them a broad range of expectations and needs. The new learning resource centre has proved to be the showcase to attract new students and with front line staff freed up to offer the very highest 'customer service', students benefit from the very best physical space managed by an enthusiastic and committed library team.

Exciting inside and out, this development ensures that the College remains at the forefront of training in South London.
